

Insight on Coaching – Guest Bio

Halee Fischer-Wright, MD, MMM

Introduction:

Dr. Halee Fischer-Wright is on the faculty at the University of Colorado, is a practicing physician, the President of Rose Medical Group, a large hospital board in Denver, and a partner at JeffersonLarsonSmith, a major Denver-based consulting firm with a clientele consisting of several Fortune 500 companies of diverse industries.

She is a certified coach through Georgetown University's program, and the architect of a number of executive programs for women in leadership. She is also co-author of Tribal Leadership, due out in February from HarperCollins, in addition to being the author of previous coaching/executive leadership publications.

Professional Experience:

She began her career in pediatrics and has since become a leading expert in not only healthcare but also general business and management circles.

Prior to joining JLS in 2005—where she heads up projects related to financial services, education, high-technology, healthcare, and entrepreneurial ventures—Halee spent the previous 10 years wearing multiple hats as an owner, manager, and physician at Foothills Pediatrics and Adolescent Medicine in Denver, Colorado. She has served on several executive hospital boards and is currently President of a 400-physician group in Denver.
