Strategy Director and Founder, International Coach Academy, and Director of Community Network Division, The Foundation of Coaching

Introduction

Robyn Logan is the founding director of International Coach Academy (ICA), a global coach training school with students in more than 40 countries. With more than 20 years experience as a consultant, corporate trainer and business coach, Robyn's current fascination is the growth of Web 2.0 technologies and concepts, in particular online social networks and their relationship to learning and coaching.

Experience

Robyn created virtual organization International Coach Academy in February of 2001, with a pilot group of 12 student coaches mostly from the U.S. and Australia. By 2003, ICA had more than 200 students participating in its programs from 14 different countries around the world and a faculty of six highly experienced and qualified coach trainers. Through the ICA, Robyn has created a school of the future – the first fully online, internationally accredited life coaching school in the world, governed by a board of coaches, business managers, senior executives, online learning experts and adult educationalists.

Robyn has more than 15 years experience building strong international networks with coaches, trainers and consultants. Prior to founding ICA, she spent more than 10 years in education and training in both teaching and leadership roles including managing a Registered Training Organization (RTO). She later founded and operated a successful multimedia and business planning consultancy (Logan Strategic).

Her clients included arts-based not-for-profits, universities and training institutions, peak bodies and multinational companies such as Holden and Kodak. Robyn has worked as a project manager and strategic planner in the vocational education and training sector both at a national and state level in Australia. She was a founding director of two companies prior to joining International Coach Academy.

Education

Robyn holds a bachelor's degree in media studies, a master's degree in education specializing in online learning, and a post-graduate diploma in organizational change management.
